THE DEWEY DECIMAL CLASSIFICATION SYSTEM

What is the Dewey Decimal System?

The Dewey Decimal Classification System (named for Melvil Dewey, its creator) is a system used to organize books so that they're easy to find. This is done by putting groups of books that are on the same topic or of the same type together. Each type of books is assigned a number. Once you know what numbers match which categories, you can find the kind of books you need.

The Three Levels of the Dewey Decimal Classification System:

First, books are divided into ten groups, numbered by hundreds. Each group represents a very broad category – for example, the 400s are books about Language.

Within each group of hundreds, books are divided again in categories of tens, each category further specifying what type of book is being represented. So, a book in the 400s is about language, but one in the 430s is about the German language in particular.

Finally, each group of tens is divided further into single numbers. You know to look in the 970s for books about North American History, but books with the call number 971 deal specifically with Canadian History. See how specific the Dewey Decimal System can get?

Actually, it gets even more specific than that, as numbers continue past the decimal point. But that's a topic for another day!
